Sib Camp is a fun, engaging summer camp that allows brothers and sisters of children with autism to connect with peers who have similar experiences. Creative and dynamic activities incorporate important issues including coping skills, understanding autism, sibling relationships, and family and peer issues.

Sib Camp follows curriculum from Sibshops, a program that supports siblings of children with special needs, as well as new activities and lessons created by the staff at The Johnson Center.

Contact us for interest in other dates, times, and age groups. Our past sibling groups have been a great success. Your child won't want to miss it!

Here's what some of our sibs have said about Sib Camp:

"When is the next one?
I want to do it again!"

"I never knew that other kids felt the same way."

"It feels good to meet
other siblings who have been through the same thing."
